In practical terms

- Competent authorities need to adapt to the new requirements at the latest one year after the entry into force ( $D + 1 Y$ ).
- Organisations would have two years / three years to show full compliance with the new management system requirements and related amendments.
  - The competent authority may raise a non-compliance finding on the basis of the new provisions introduced with the amending regulation starting from the date of applicability ( $D + 1 Y$ ).
  - The corrective action implementation period granted should consider the applicable transition period ( $D + 2 Y$  or  $D + 3 Y$ ).
- During the transition period the competent authority may not suspend, limit or revoke a certificate on the grounds of a level 1 finding relating to any of the new requirements.
- An implementation plan for gradual implementation of the new organisation requirements should ideally be agreed with the competent authority before the date of applicability of the amending regulation ( $D + 1$  year).
